RAIL SALARY RAISE ASKED.

Mr. McAdoo is considering Proposals Affecting Supervising Officials. Proposals to raise salaries of railway supervising officials, such as general, divisional and assistant superintendents, master mechanics, superintendents of transportation and intermediate primary officers are under consideration by the railroad administration. Action will be taken as soon as regional directors gather from federal managers information on present salaries, together with specific recommendations for individual increases. The general wage advance for railway employees did not affect salaries of more than $250 a month and gave little additional pay to men making above $175. Most supervising officers receive more than $250.

JUNIOR COUNCILS TO TRAIN.

Military Course for Young People in Royal Arcanum. Members of the Royal Arcanum under twenty-one years of age are to be organized into junior councils for the purpose of military training. Special uniforms are to be provided and men with knowledge of military tactics will train the youths. In every large city where the society has a strong organization, it is announced, the younger members are being given an opportunity to secure preparatory training for service when called in the next draft. Recently the order lowered the age limit for membership to sixteen years, and a large addition of membership to the order has resulted.

E. F. HURLEY'S DEATH
PROBED BY CORONER

Due to Lack of Care, Verdict—Auto Speed Excessive, Witnesses Say.

That Edgar F. Hurley of Maryland, who was killed early yesterday in an automobile accident at the south end of the Aqueduct bridge, came to his death as the result of a lack of care was the verdict of a coroner's jury which held an inquest over his body yesterday afternoon at the morgue. Witnesses testified that Hurley was running his machine at an excessive rate of speed at the time of the accident. Hurley was on his way to his Virginia home. On the Virginia side of the bridge he struck a bump, causing him to lose control of the machine, and it struck a telegraph pole and fell into an excavation at the abutment of the new Key bridge. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillie Hurley, and a brother, Lawrence, proprietor of a boiler shop at 1219 Ohio avenue.

ANOTHER COMPLAINS OF MAXIMUM CHARGES

Declares Dealers Take Advantage of Top Prices on Fair List.

That many retail food merchants in Washington sell at only the top prices allowed by the food administration regardless of how low the wholesale price paid by them may have been, was the charge made by a resident of Takoma Park, D. C., at the local food administration yesterday. He declared that many of the merchants are reaping unwarranted profits as a result of taking advantage of the maximum prices quoted by the administration on its weekly fair price list. In many cases this profit will show a gain of more than 100 per cent, the complainant said. This protestant also lodged a complaint against the price charged for print butter by one of the large dealers in Washington. The price in question was 60 cents a pound, despite the fact that the official fair price list prohibited a price above 55 cents a pound for best print butter.

FORMER STAR EMPLOYE
AGAIN CITED AT FRONT

Private Frank Ward of Engineers Saw Service at Mexican Border.

Private Frank G. Ward, a former employee of The Evening Star, has for the second time been cited for bravery in action, according to official announcement by the War Department. He was reported on June 29 for conspicuous bravery in having asked permission to go into action, advanced six yards and killed a German sniper who had been causing casualties. He was twice buried by shell fire but escaped unharmed and was decorated for this action. The details of his more recent act of bravery have not yet been told in dispatches. Young Ward, who is but twenty-one years of age, is a member of Company D, 1st United States Engineers. He has been in France since last fall. He was formerly in the District National Guard and served on the Mexican border. Just before going overseas he was employed by the Washington Terminal Company. His mother is Mrs. Annie M. CO-OPERATIVE PLAN
TO RELIEVE H. C. L.

Community Centers to Expand Experimental Buying for Family Groups.

BIG RESULTS PROMISED

Co-operative buying on a big scale, offering substantial relief to families which are feeling most keenly the pinch of high food prices, is to be inaugurated this fall by Washington's community centers, aided by the District food administration. More than a dozen centers, which already have rendered valuable service this summer in procuring food commodities for family groups at wholesale prices, are planning to extend their activities, to pool their orders and bring staples to Washington in carload lots. This will be the first step in carrying out a comprehensive scheme for bringing relief to those families which are willing to provide part of the labor in supplying their larger needs. The development will be the opening of a community warehouse, where commodities other than staples can be stored and distributed through the centers. Consumption of the second step will wait upon the organization of more community centers, to that effect, a section of the District may be represented in the co-operative undertaking. It is proposed to open a center in every schoolhouse. The centers will be represented by a central committee which will operate the warehouse.

Warehouse Is Thought Of.

Community co-operative buying, an experiment in Washington, has met with such success that it promises revolutionary changes in the management of many households. It is not the intention that retail dealers shall be supplanted, but rather the usual Saturday afternoon rush to the store will be replaced by the more orderly and economical activities of the centers. The scheme is designed for the benefit of those families which are unable to deliver purchases from the centers to their homes in return for the reduced prices at which the commodities are sold. Wholesale lots, individuals who are not willing to supply a part of the labor by not saving the cost of delivery will not be benefited by the plan.

Paraded With Band.

Headed by a brass band, the strikers today paraded to Whitehall, four or five abreast. Downing street, adjoining where Premier Lloyd George resides, was packed with strikers. A number of the strikers who marched through the Strand were given a mixed reception at the crowded Wellington street junction, leading to Waterloo bridge, the strikers encountered a solitary section of police who were struggling to regulate the dense traffic. He was surrounded and made to walk some distance to the rear of the group. A number of overseas soldiers and sailors ran to the rescue of the special officer, bawling the strikers and asking: "Don't you join the army, you slackers!"

MOURNING BRASSARDS FOR DEAD HEROES' KIN

Red Cross to Distribute Free to Parents and Widows and to Others at Cost.

Mourning brassards, to be worn by relatives of men who have given their lives to their country, will be provided by the American Red Cross, it is announced. These brassards, which are to be used in lieu of general mourning, were suggested and designed by the women's committee of the Council of National Defense. The brassards will be furnished free to the parents or widows of men who have died in the service of their country, or to the members of the family.

The brassard, which is to be worn on the left breast, midway between the shoulder and elbow, is a band of black broadcloth or other material three inches wide, on the ends of which the regulation military star is embroidered in gold thread. The number of stars on a brassard will denote the extent of the sacrifice made by the family.

The brassards will be made and distributed by the chapters of the Red Cross working in conjunction with local units of the women's committee of the Council of National Defense. The material supply of materials for the manufacture of the mourning emblem has been purchased by the Red Cross divisions of the organization for distribution through their chapters. It is expected that the first brassards will be ready for distribution about the middle of September.
